What is the EUDR?

The EUDR is the name given to the European Union's new regulation on imported deforestation.

This regulation aims to ensure that the imported goods' production did not involve any deforestation or forest degradation, nor took place in violation of applicable laws and human rights principles.

How is the EUDR implemented?

The EUDR has already been adopted and will come into force in December 2024.

It applies to European importers and operators who place timber, cocoa, coffee, natural rubber, palm oil, soya or beef on the market.

In addition to verifying the absence of deforestation, importers will be required to check that their suppliers comply with national laws and applicable regulations, in order to limit the risk of non-compliance. This process is known as Due Diligence.

Failure to comply means running the risk of potentially illegal supply, thus having products immobilized or seized on arrival in Europe and no longer being able to export/import to Europe from the end of 2024.

Tailored support services

BFCConsult has an experience of many years in conducting Due Diligence for the timber sector, in the context of the European Union Timber Regulation (EUTR).
